

The Department of Digital Humanities at King's College London is looking for a highly motivated and technically sophisticated individual to join the research and development team. The position will involve data modelling and analysis, plus the design and development of both editorial and administrative tools and public facing web applications, for the second phase of the Gascon Rolls \(1317-1468\) project, currently being carried out in collaboration with the University of Bordeaux in France. The focus of the work will be on the exploration of historical/technical issues in adapting historical data to wider digital frameworks, the application of geospatial and data mining approaches, new modes of visualisation and multi-device publishing, and the development of a French interface for the project.

Closing date for applications is 12 February 2013.

For vacancy details please visit http://www.kcl.ac.uk/depsta/pertra/vacancy/external/pers_detail.php?jobindex=12763