

The CENDARI \(Collaborative European Digital Archive Infrastructure\) website has been launched. CEND

ARI is a research collaboration aimed at integrating digital archives and resources for research on medieval and modern European history.

The project brings technical experts together with leading historians and existing infrastructures (archives, libraries and other digital projects) within a research programme that is informed by cutting-edge technical development and driven by active reflection on the impact of the digital age on scholarly practice.

This is a 4-year, European Commission-funded project led by

Trinity College Dublin

, in partnership with 14 institutions across 7 countries, to facilitate access to archives and resources in Europe for the benefit of scholars everywhere.

CENDARI is also running a short

questionnaire

about primary resources, interesting collections and valuable finding aids to help shape the future of technical support for historic research. Please take a few minutes to complete their

questionnaire

.