

DL.org's latest interview is with DARIAH project member Tobias Blanke of the Centre for e-Research at King's College London. Tobias offers insights into pioneering work in the eHumanities, as well as interoperability benefits and challenges, positioning DL.org, DARIAH and other initiatives in this landscape.

The interview looks at the main value-add of Digital Libraries and Research Infrastructures for the Arts and Humanities; early success stories and top-level challenges moving forward; major challenges for DL interoperability; approaches to interoperability recommended, positioning DL.org in this landscape; the role of standards and how DARIAH will contribute to the evolving eHumanities landscape.

Read the on-line interview or downloadable version .